

TakeHomeDK Week 1 Promotion Automation Pack

Anonymous, low-risk promotion plan for Reddit, Medium/Substack and X

Prepared for TakeHomeDK - 2026-06-29

Purpose and safety rules

This pack is designed to help promote TakeHomeDK under the brand account, not under a personal identity. The goal is to be useful, transparent and non-spammy.

Use the brand identity: u/TakeHomeDK, TakeHomeDK, <https://takehomedk.com>, and takehomedk@protonmail.com if needed.

Do not share passwords or give account access to any automation system. Post manually during the first weeks so you can avoid spam filters and adapt to subreddit rules.

For week 1, keep volume low: one profile post, one subreddit post, three to five helpful comments, and one article draft.

Week 1 schedule

Day 1: Complete the Reddit profile. Post the profile introduction on your own u/TakeHomeDK profile. Do not post in subreddits yet.

Day 2: Search Reddit for relevant salary, Copenhagen rent, Pay Limit Scheme and moving-to-Denmark questions. Leave two helpful comments without links.

Day 3: Leave one more helpful no-link comment. Save interesting questions for future content ideas.

Day 4 or 5: Publish one careful feedback-oriented post in r/expats. Do not reuse the profile post exactly.

Day 6: Publish or prepare the Medium/Substack article. Link naturally to TakeHomeDK and the rent guide.

Day 7: Check whether comments/posts were removed, ignored or engaged with. If no removals, prepare one r/copenhagen post for week 2.

Reddit profile post

Title: I built a free Denmark salary calculator for expats comparing job offers

Body:

I built TakeHomeDK as a free tool for international professionals comparing Danish job offers. The idea is simple: before accepting a job in Denmark, the important number is not only the gross salary. It is what you actually keep after tax, pension, rent and recurring living costs. The calculator estimates monthly take-home pay, annual net salary, employer and employee pension effects, Danish tax layers, Pay Limit Scheme salary margin, Copenhagen living-cost leftover and rent/location trade-offs. It is not official tax, legal or immigration advice, but it links to public Danish sources and explains the assumptions.

Site: <https://takehomedk.com>. Feedback is welcome, especially from people who have moved to Denmark, accepted a Danish job offer, or compared Copenhagen salaries before relocating.

First subreddit post: r/expats

Title option A: I made a free Denmark salary calculator for expats - feedback welcome

Title option B: Before accepting a Danish job offer: gross salary vs actual take-home pay

Body:

Hi everyone, I built a free calculator for international professionals who are considering job offers in Denmark. A lot of expats see a Danish gross salary and then struggle to understand what it actually means after tax, pension, rent and living costs. The calculator estimates monthly take-home salary, Danish tax layers, employer/employee pension effect, Pay Limit Scheme salary margin, Copenhagen living-cost leftover and rent/location trade-offs. It also includes guides for salary ranges, Copenhagen rent, Pay Limit Scheme checks and role-specific salary pages. Site: <https://takehomedk.com>. Important note: it is not official tax, legal or immigration advice. It is only a planning tool and links to public Danish sources where possible. I would appreciate feedback, especially on whether the assumptions are clear enough, whether anything is confusing for someone moving to Denmark, which salary/rent scenarios should be added, and whether the wording feels trustworthy.

Subreddit priority list

Best first choices: r/expats, r/copenhagen, r/dkfinance, r/IWantOut, r/cscareerquestionsEU.

Good but use carefully: r/Denmark, r/eupersonalfinance, r/AskEurope, r/careerguidance, r/jobs.

Later, after the account has history: r/EuropeFIRE, r/financialindependence, r/datascience, r/SoftwareEngineering, r/biotech, r/pharmaindustry.

Recommended order: profile post first, then helpful comments, then r/expats, then r/copenhagen in week 2 if nothing was removed.

Five Reddit comments without links

1. For Denmark, I would separate gross salary, employee pension, employer pension, bonus and rent. The gross number alone can be misleading, especially in Copenhagen.
2. If the job is in Copenhagen, rent is often the biggest variable. I would calculate monthly net salary first, then subtract realistic rent and recurring costs before deciding.
3. If this is connected to a work permit, check the Pay Limit Scheme threshold carefully and verify with official SIRI guidance. Do not rely only on the gross salary number.
4. Pension is easy to overlook. Employer pension can be valuable, but it is not the same as monthly cash in your bank account.
5. I would test a conservative scenario with higher rent and no bonus. If the offer still works in that scenario, it is much safer.

Three Reddit comments with soft links

1. A useful way to evaluate a Danish offer is to separate gross salary, pension, bonus and rent. I built a free planning calculator for this here: <https://takehomedk.com>. It is not official advice, but it can help compare scenarios.
2. For Copenhagen, I would calculate monthly net salary and then subtract realistic rent and recurring costs. You can test different salary/rent assumptions here: <https://takehomedk.com>.
3. If your question involves the Pay Limit Scheme, use a calculator only as a first screen and verify with SIRI. TakeHomeDK includes a Pay Limit Scheme margin estimate: <https://takehomedk.com/denmark-pay-limit-scheme-checker-2026>.

r/copenhagen post for later

Title: Copenhagen salary vs rent: I made a calculator and would appreciate local feedback

Body:

I built TakeHomeDK to help international candidates understand what a Danish job offer means after tax, pension and rent. The Copenhagen part is especially important because rent can completely change whether a salary feels comfortable. The site estimates take-home pay, pension effects, Pay Limit Scheme margin and leftover money after living costs. It also has a rent/location guide comparing Copenhagen, Frederiksberg, Gentofte, Lyngby, Hørsholm, Roskilde, Kalundborg, Holbæk and Odense. Site: <https://takehomedk.com>. If you live in Copenhagen, I would appreciate feedback on whether the rent assumptions and wording feel realistic. It is not official advice; just a planning tool based on public sources and transparent assumptions.

Medium/Substack article draft

Title: Is 60,000 DKK a good salary in Copenhagen in 2026?

Article:

A salary of 60,000 DKK per month can sound high to someone moving to Denmark, but the important question is not the gross number. The practical question is what remains after tax, pension, rent and recurring living costs. In Copenhagen, rent is often the biggest variable. A single professional may feel comfortable if rent is controlled, but the same salary can feel tighter with a central apartment, family housing or high recurring costs. When comparing an offer, separate base salary, employer pension, employee pension, bonus and relocation support. Then calculate monthly net pay and test at least two rent scenarios: realistic and conservative. If the conservative scenario still leaves a useful buffer, the offer is safer. If it only works with optimistic rent or bonus assumptions, negotiate before accepting. TakeHomeDK is a free calculator for this comparison: <https://takehomedk.com>. For rent/location trade-offs, see: <https://takehomedk.com/copenhagen-rent-guide-salary-location>. It is not official tax or immigration advice, but it helps structure the questions before verifying with official sources.

Three X/Twitter posts

1. Before accepting a Danish job offer, calculate what you actually keep - not just the gross salary. TakeHomeDK estimates net pay, pension, tax, Pay Limit Scheme margin and rent pressure: <https://takehomedk.com>
2. Copenhagen salary tip: 60,000 DKK/month can feel very different depending on rent, pension and bonus assumptions. Test conservative rent before signing. Calculator: <https://takehomedk.com>
3. Moving to Denmark for work? Compare salary, pension, taxes, Pay Limit Scheme margin and living-cost leftover before accepting the offer. Free tool: <https://takehomedk.com>

Directory listing copy

Short description: Free Denmark salary and take-home pay calculator for expats evaluating Danish job offers.

Long description: TakeHomeDK helps international professionals understand Danish job offers before accepting or relocating. It estimates monthly take-home salary, Danish tax layers, employer and employee pension effects, Pay Limit Scheme salary margin and leftover money after living costs. It also includes salary guides, Copenhagen rent guidance and transparent methodology notes. The tool is not official tax, legal or immigration advice, but it links to public Danish sources and is designed for practical offer comparison.

Category suggestions: finance calculator, salary calculator, expat tool, relocation tool, tax calculator, Denmark guide.

Rules to avoid spam

Do not post the same link repeatedly across multiple subreddits.

Do not use titles like "Best Denmark salary calculator". Ask for feedback instead.

Do not argue if a moderator removes a post. Thank them or move on.

Do not pretend to be a random user. Be transparent that TakeHomeDK is your tool/brand account.

Keep the first week slow. Trust and account history matter more than volume.